

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON ECONOMIC REFORMS

The International Conference on Economic Reforms was organized by the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund. The conference was held in Washington, D.C., from October 1 to 4, 1996. The main theme of the conference was "Economic Reforms in Transition Economies".

The conference was attended by representatives from over 50 countries, including all transition economies. The conference was organized into several sessions, including a plenary session, a panel discussion, and a round table. The plenary session was held on October 1, 1996, and was chaired by the President of the World Bank, James D. Wolfensohn. The panel discussion was held on October 2, 1996, and was chaired by the Managing Director of the International Monetary Fund, Michel Camdessus. The round table was held on October 3, 1996, and was chaired by the Vice President of the World Bank, Andrew Ross. The conference was a success, and it provided a valuable opportunity for the participants to discuss the challenges and opportunities of economic reforms in transition economies. The conference was also a landmark event, as it was the first time that the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund had organized a joint conference. The conference was a testament to the commitment of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to support economic reforms in transition economies. The conference was a success, and it provided a valuable opportunity for the participants to discuss the challenges and opportunities of economic reforms in transition economies. The conference was also a landmark event, as it was the first time that the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund had organized a joint conference. The conference was a testament to the commitment of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to support economic reforms in transition economies.

